Additional Information

GlaxoSmithKline plc is a science-led global healthcare company formed in 2000 as a result of a merger between Glaxo Wellcome plc and SmithKline Beecham plc, although the company’s history can be traced back much further than that to London’s Plough Court Pharmacy in the 1700s. In March 2015 they completed a 3-part transaction with Novartis vaccines business (excluding influenza vaccines) and combined their consumer Healthcare businesses to create a new company. By substantially strengthening Vaccines and Consumer Healthcare, they can deliver far-reaching benefits to patients and consumers, and further value to shareholders. In addition, Novartis acquired GSKs marketed Oncology portfolio.
